Character

A powerful bouquet of peach, apricot, quince and pear, accompanied by floral violet notes, emanates from this white wine with its yellow glow. The fruit remain very evident on the palate, where the wine is slightly crisp, attractively fresh, soft, full-bodied and harmonious. Its long finish gives enduring enjoyment.

Producer

Weingut Stadt Krems

The town of Krems is situated in a basin at an altitude of approx. 220 metres above sea level. The vineyards feature two types of soil: gneisses are ideal for Riesling, while loess soils give the Grüner Veltliner its flavour and structure. Two climate zones come together at this point: in the west an oceanic climate with mild winters and moderately warm summers, in the east a pannonic climate with very cold winters and dry summers. This results in stark temperature differences between day and night within a confined space, balanced out by the Danube. These extremes define the vegetation, providing the perfect basis for fruity wines with an intense bouquet.
